So what's this all about?

When one spring night a few years ago I started jotting down a list of awesome things, I never imagined my thoughts on the smell of gasoline, thinking it's Thursday when it's really Friday, or wearing underwear just out of the dryer would take off the way it has. My blog 1000AwesomeThings.com started as a reminder—in a world of rising sea levels, global conflict, and a troubled economy—of the daily joys that make life sweet: finding money in my coat pocket, dropping my cell phone on the ground and realizing it's totally fine, or the smell of a bakery . . .

In the years since, I've found that taking note of these little moments can really make an awesome difference in our stressed, jam-packed lives.

We all need to celebrate the awesome that surrounds us. Every day of the year. So come on into The Calendar of Awesome and, for just a minute each day, stop and appreciate all the tiny joys that make life

And maybe anything will.

New Year's Day

When you're really tired and about to fall asleep and someone throws a blanket on you

When you start drifting on the couch you enter that blissful semi conscious Pre-Nap World where your thoughts float and zoom around your brain and your muscles relax and de-intensify. The sun feels warm on your face, the radio in the background fades to a comforting white noise, and you know . . . you just know . . . that you're about to fall asleep.

That's why it's great whenever someone notices you lying there and quietly grabs a blanket from the closet to toss on your semi conscious self. When that happens, you immediately feel the warmth radiating around you, a tiny smile curls itself on the corners of your lips, and you fall deeper and deeper into a nice, relaxing rest.

When the dog's really excited you're back home

Greasy forehead, sore ankles, and a dull headache cap your traffic-jammy ride home from a long day at work. Dragging yourself to the door, your stomach rumbles and grumbles as you picture the bland frozen burrito you're gonna nuke for dinner.

Yeah, the day got you down, the day knocked you out, but suddenly you unlock the door and your mood zooms sky-high as there's a BARK BARK BARK BARK BARK BARK BARK BARK!!! waiting.

Someone's happy to see you.

Because it's always best avoiding debates about whether your pineapple juice will drip over to my side of the pie.

Sucking in your stomach just before the picture is taken

When someone whips out a camera, it's time to suck it in, baby. Eye the trigger finger and pull in when they push down. After all, maybe there's a six-pack under that stained and baggy T-shirt. I mean, we have no reason to suspect a jiggly bowl of jelly belly or anything.

There's just no proof.

THURSDAY

JANUARY 5

When you meet up with a group of friends and they stop talking to celebrate your arrival

Sometimes you're late for the date.

Stepping into the dark restaurant, shaking off your umbrella, squeezing past the bar, you don't know what you're gonna get: Who's gonna be here? Have they already ordered? Will there even be a chair?

If you're like me, baby butterflies flap in your stomach when you stumble into Tonight's Social Scene for the first time. Brushing rain off your eyebrows, unzipping your jacket, you smile nervously as you spot your friends and walk over to their crowded table in the back.

And if your entrance is marked by heads turning, forks dropping, fists raising, and loud cheers, it means you're hanging with a great group. So smile and accept their little Welcome Package of hugs and high-fives.

It's gonna be a great night.

Taking the price tag off in one clean peel

Have you ever waged a quiet ten-minute war against a stubborn price tag?

You see it slapped on the side of a souvenir or stuck to the bottom of a vase, so you start peeling it off with your fingers. But then it tears and you hold a sad little scrap in your hand.

That's when it's time to roll up the sleeves and wheel out big guns like the edge of a credit card or nail polish remover. Nothing is off limits as you fight for your right to give a non-sticky action figure to your nephew on his birthday.

So you rub in oils and lotions, dig your fingernails, and finally, huffing and puffing, smear it all off. But since it takes forever and stresses you out, just smile and love it lots when that tag rolls off in one smooth peel.

MONDAY

The moment at a concert when the crowd figures out what song they're playing

Sweaty crowds in sticky shirts scream and scramble for better views between songs. Drums kick boom and guitars get tuned just before the bright lights flip up and flick on. Everyone slides forward on the beer-slicked floor and as the first notes kick in we all catch our breath.

TUESDAY

JANUARY 10

Wearing the shoes you just bought out of the store

Sometimes those old, ratty sandals need to get buried. When sidewalk steps rattle your spine and walking to the store gives you severe Blackfoot, it's time to go shopping.

Next time you slide on that fresh new pair in the store, just pause for a second and look wistfully at the broken, smooth-soled flat ones in your hand. So many rainy nights, so many deck parties, so many quick trips for gas.

Fight tears and steady your lip as you stare the teenage cashier square in the eye and say:

“Do you guys have a garbage can?”

Waking up to the smell of sizzling bacon

As you laze around in crumpled sheets, sun streaking through the blinds, your eyes slowly blink open and your lips curl into a slow smile. You make some deep, grunting noises as you twist your back and stretch your neck.

Then it hits you.

Nose twitching, brain sniffing, you catch faint fumes of sizzling bacon drifting up from the kitchen. Can it be? Is this why you woke up? You bunny-sniff again and this time you're positive, you're certain, you're sure.

Bacon!

It smells like Mom's cooking breakfast. It smells like a sunny Sunday sleep-in. It smells like pajamas and a fresh newspaper. It smells like little white grease bubbles in an old black frying pan.

And it smells a lot like

Stepping into the shower when it's already at the perfect temperature

Spin the dial to the left and you're drowning under a frozen glacier waterfall. Spin it to the right and you're stinging under some sharp second-degree burns.

We all know your perfect temperature lies somewhere between these dangerous extremes, so every time you strip down to scrub up you're playing detective.

Yes, there's one or two dials, max, that you're spinning around in your groggy half-asleep state to find the perfect shower temperature. When you step in that shower and it's just right, you're loving it. Bring on the Shampoo Afros, lathery bellies, and nose blowing as you get ready for ten hot minutes of

Sleeping with one leg on top of the covers and one leg under them

Before you flick out the lights and slip into golden slumbers, you must first guess your Sleep Comfort Zone. If you've ever woken up with the shivers or the sweats, then you've added too many blankets or slept too nude.

If you're on your own, there are ceiling fans, heating vents, and your general sweatiness to consider. If you're with a pet or a partner, you've got double the hot-breath factor and a lot more sweaty legs under the covers.

If you're like me, then your eyes might blink open in the middle of the night as you realize you're uncomfortable. And if this happens, just hook yourself up and toss one leg on top of the covers and one leg under them.

Also known as the Toe Vent.
